And the Hymn—"Jesus, Savior of My Soul."

The public has appreciated this "Free Music Day" once a month, as the record show that nearly Seventy Thousand of the Songs have been given away.

On Saturday, December 3, 1892,

The Crescent Drug Company will donate to every customer in its store who Purchase Goods to the Value of 25 Cents,

The Crescent Portfolio of Song Music,

Containing the Eighteen Songs heretofore mentioned.

This rule of a 25 cent purchase we are compelled to adopt to prevent wasteful distribution. The Portfolio will not be for sale anywhere. Containing not less than fifty-five pages of music, with a handsome cover, and securely bound, it will be the most novel, as well as the most elegant souvenir ever donated to customers by any business firm in New Jersey. You cannot purchase anyone of the eighteen songs for less than forty cents, and a simple purchase of Twenty-five Cents will entitle you to a copy of the Portfolio. A purchase of Fifty Cents will entitle you to Two Copies. Seventy-five Cents Three Copies, Etc.

Of course there will be a tremendous crush in our stores on December 3d. Come early in the morning and avoid the crush.

We desire to say positively that the Portfolio will be donated Only on Saturday, December 3d. You cannot obtain it on other days.

We shall have displayed on December 3d for sale our entire stock of CHRISTMAS NOVELTIES. We have an abundance of good things that we can sell you much lower than dry goods stores or bazaar stores. And as to other drug stores, we promise to sell you lower than other drug stores can buy at wholesale.

Also on PERFUMERY GOODS, we are lower priced than any other New Jersey store.

Free Music Portfolio Day will be on Saturday, December 3d.

The "Country Circus" at the Broadway.

The first week of the second season of C. B. Jefferson, Klaw & Erlanger's Country Circus in New York has been a veritable triumph. The handsome Broadway Theatre is nightly crowded and this unique entertainment is already attracting audiences from many of the suburban cities. The New York press is unanimous in its approval, and especial emphasis is given to the tone and purity of the play and circus. No more wholesome or entertaining performance has ever been presented to the public, and the magnificent pageant, reproducing a circus parade, the gorgeous ensemble of many gorgeously costumed beauties and the magnificent ring's diversionism is without parallel. It is justly conceded that in the Glissarettes, the Swedish acrobats, Marlow and Dunham, the challenging bar performers, Katie Holloway and William DeMott, the equestrians, a most stupendous programme is presented. Of the horse and pony display it is enough to say that it is without equal and is as attractive to the old as to the children. Saturday matinees will only be given until further notice.

The New York "Stars."

The New York Yanderville Specialty Company, under the management of Gus Hill, comes to Waldman's next week with a big array of clever specialty performers. There is not an act on the bill that is in the least degree tame. Everything is bright and brisk, and full of humor, spirit and novelty. More, too, the show is larger than any other variety attraction, and there seems no good reason why a banner week's business should not be played to at Waldman's. Pretty Maude Beverly will introduce her latest vocal gem, "Velvet and Eggs," which has made an instantaneous hit wherever it has been heard. Emerson and Cook, black-face comedians, will entertain with something better than they ever offered before. Besides these, the following will appear, with many more, the mention of whose names would require too much space: Satsuma, the Japanese juggler; John E. Drew, dancer and change artist; MacAvoy and May, celebrated comedians; Swift and Chase, musical comedians; the Paterson brothers on the horizontal bars and Fred Huber, whose happy production of "A Hot Pickle," sends everybody home snoring.

Cataract Cannot be Cured with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Cataract is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Cataract Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Cataract Cure is not a quick medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best medicines known, combined with blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Cataract. Send for testimonials, free.

A Scared Animal.

Swift footed animals that have been tamed, with abundant facilities for making a living of their own, are apt to take French leave in spite of kind treatment, although in moments of danger such renegades will sometimes remember an old protector and volunteer to renounce their habits of truancy. The post trader of the Forbin de Sag Pablo, near Mazatlan, raised a young ocelot, which hung about the house, or rather the ranch, for a couple of years, but at last ceased to recognize the authority of its landlord. Juanita would absent herself for weeks together and visit the post only as a guest, or a privileged member of an inspecting committee, for she rummages the premises, appears and disappears without asking anybody's leave, and resents every attempt at familiarity on the part of her former owner. But one evening she had just entered the store when a troop of horsemen alighted at the gate, and a minute later a government scout with a big wolf dog stepped up to the counter, while his companions deposited their saddlebags near the open door.

Juanita cast an uneasy glance at the blockaded door and in the next instant caught sight of the dog and he of her, when the attitude of both parties became so disagreeably suggestive of an impending set-to that the scout reached for a stick to chase the dog out. But Juanita either misconstrued his motive or had already made up her mind to secure a vantage ground, for just when he faced about she leaped upon the counter and with the next jump upon the shoulder of her old master, and there proceeded to "get her back up," growling viciously and bristling up to twice her natural size, like a cat.—San Francisco Chronicle.

About a National Flower.

There is very little use in talking about an American national flower. We are not a nation, no matter how many big N's we may put to the word, in the sense that Englishmen and Frenchmen constitute a nation. What is typical in one section of our continental republic is not typical in another, and an emblem which might mean a great deal in New England or New York would have but an artificial significance in Louisiana or California. State flowers we might have, and to some extent we do have them. California has formally adopted the Echecholtzia, or California poppy, as its emblem. Maine men wear a pine branch when they want to indicate what state they have come from.

Our Massachusetts flower is naturally the trailing arbutus, and that ought to be formally adopted as our emblem. At the Grand Army encampment nearly every state delegation wore something which was characteristic of the state. We comprehend ourselves better if we divide ourselves up by forty-four, and there are enough plants and flowers to go around.—Boston Transcript.
